CAMPUS

Regents update

The student body's proposal to name the Administration Building after President Dean Hubbard did not make it through the Board of Regents. It was defeated by a 4-3 vote Wednesday.

Regents Rita Hanks, Don Schneider and Doug Sutton voted in favor of the measure; Rachelle Brown, Lydia Hurst, Douglas Wyckoff and Board President Bill Loch were opposed. Regent Gary Panethiere abstained. See the full story at Nwmissourinews.com.

Walking for a cause

Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic Council and Student Senate are sponsoring the Come Walk a Mile in Her Shoes walk. The walk is a campus wide philanthropy to help raise money the Women's Battered Shelter in Maryville.

The registration deadline is 5 p.m. March 20 in the Campus Activities Office. The entry fee is $10. Lunch will be held from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on March 31 and the walk will begin at 12 p.m. in front of the Union.

COMMUNITY

Candidates forum

Maryville Citizens for Community Action and the Maryville Chamber of Commerce will host a candidates' forum at 7 p.m. on March 31 at the Nodaway County Courthouse.

The Political Science Club will also host a forum at 4 p.m. at The Station.

City council and school board candidates will be on hand for both events as they prepare for April 7 municipal elections.

MISSOURI GOV. JAY Nixon visited campus Monday for a tour of Northwest's Alternative Energy facility to get ideas on how to increase Missouri's potential for alternative fuels.

Nixon commends Northwest for energy use

By Kiley Swopes
Chief Reporter

Missouri Gov. Jay Nixon visited the Northwest campus Monday to view the fuel production facility and tour the power plant for ideas to move Missouri forward in energy efficiency.

The students are actively involved in recycling to make a more energy-dependable world, Nixon said.

"I am very proud," Nixon said. "Maryville has not only taken animal waste but paper waste to help provide electricity that fuels us."

Northwest senior Brian Biggs learned about the Alternative Energy Program his freshman year.

"I think it is great that we are able to take something that would end up in a landfill, make it useful, and save the state money at the same time," Biggs said.

The plant has boilers dating back to 1958, which opens up more options. The University's system can help transform Missouri's economy to get better jobs in the future, Nixon said.

"We have a 25-year high-end of employment," Nixon said. "The economy is going to change if we compete in the future. The best way is through energy independence."

With the economy right now, finding a more affordable way to cut back on expenses will benefit future generations, Biggs said.

"I agree that creating new 'green jobs' is a great way to help cut costs and take the See GOVERNOR on A5

"Your nose is broken."

Hearing this in English is painful enough.

"Tu nariz se rompio."

Hearing it in Spanish, during the second week of job training in a new town – in a country which happens to be the second poorest in the Western Hemisphere, can take pain to another threshold.

One of the first cultural connections Maryville native Andrea Tappmeyer made during her initial days as a Peace Corps volunteer in Nicaragua was between her nose and a two-by-four being carried upon a local's head.

"Quirky" is how she describes this day of playing street soccer with children which almost sent her away from her Peace Corps mission of serving America for the purpose of peace by working in a developing county.

Despite being medically evacuated to Panama for a month, Tappmeyer wasn't deterred. She had made a commitment to her new community, a nation where years of

ST PATRICK'S DAY

Shortest parade lives up to tall expectations

By Elizabeth Sexton

Shimmers of green party beads sparkled in the sun like emeralds hidden among the abandoned plastic cups, which lined the short walkway from Fourth to Fifth Street.

By 5:27 p.m. only a handful of post parade tailgaters, including one man dressed in the head-to-toe leprechaun flair of striped black and white tights and an oversized top hat, remained on the previously packed sidewalks of Buchanan Street.

Those making their way toward the rock music blaring from inside The Palms paid little attention to the trail of water, tinted to a shade of gray-asparagus, slowly creeping to the sewers below.

Ten minutes prior, at the military time of 17:17, on March 17, the Maryville asphalt stretching in front of the local hot spot had been the crowded center of attention during the 22nd Annual World's Shortest St Patrick's Day Parade.

At 87 feet exactly and about four minutes in duration, the parade is famous among celebrations honoring the legend of St. Patrick.

The parade, previously certified by the Guinness Book of World Records, gets shorter every year in order to maintain its record as the World's Shortest St. Patrick's Day Parade.

Wanting the record to be re-validated, Palm's owner Paul Thompson will use a video from the parade in attempts to lure back representatives from the record book who did not make attendance this year.

Despite the absence of judges, crowd goes from across America came to see the short spectacle for themselves:

DISTINGUISHED LECTURE

Speaker worried for Sudanese

By Greg Miller
Missourian Reporter

The message of hope is powerful, especially when given by a man who found freedom after so many hardships. John Bul Dau is one of the Lost Boys of Sudan.

He came to Northwest to speak about his story, and to serve as inspiration of hope to others.

"You can overcome anything," Dau said.

Dau said he was afraid what would happen to Sudan in 2011, when elections will be held, and citizens will vote whether southern Sudan should be independent from the North.

"My worry ... who is going to protect the right of people to vote" Dau said. "I'm asking other people to support the decision the southern Sudanese make."

Dau said he feared the northern part of Sudan may cause trouble if the south is not free to govern themselves.

He told students when

Simulation prepares Northwest for disaster crisis

By Kiley Swopes
Chief Reporter

The Comprehension Crisis Response (CCR) minor uses a multidisciplinary approach to study crises, drawing from courses and faculty in geography, psychology, social sciences and communication. Sixteen Northwest students and six faculty attended the 2009 Atlantic Hope simulation March 5-9 in Fort Pierce, Fla. Atlantic Hope is a training exercise for people who are looking at careers in disaster relief, humanitarian work, psychology, human resources or related fields, Northwest junior Chaz Johnson said. Johnson attended Atlantic Hope in 2008 after being enrolled in a disaster psychology course. "CCR is my only minor," Johnson said. "I choose CCR because it sounded interesting and after going to Atlantic Hope 08, I thought it would be a great minor to have." Throughout the weekend participants learned first aid, how to use the FEMA Incident Command System and light search and rescue, Johnson said. Teammates learned how to handle quite a bit of stress and physical strain, Wendy Lilly said. "In the Incident Command it started out rocky, but then our team pulled together and we were able to build camp in very little time," Lilly said. The living conditions were what are expected in the field, Lilly said. "We ate rations," Lilly said.

"We had access to water at all times and we slept on cots in our sleeping bags. Part of the time we were sleeping in a building and for one night we slept out in the fields in tents." Atlantic Hope costs $125 plus a plane ticket from Kansas City, Mo. to Orlando, Fla. Participants were given specific instructions to bring a water bottle, tactical pants, boots, sleeping bag and other personal items, Johnson said. Atlantic Hope left participants with many memorable memories, Johnson said. "Atlantic Hope teaches a person what they are capable of doing and then teaches them how to do more," Johnson said. "This is an excellent education program for people who want to further their education and their abilities as a leader."

INDISPENSABLE WOMEN

Grijia Chavala
Chavala has worked at Northwest for 20 years. She currently works as the senior project manager for the University.
"An indispensable woman is someone who is reachable to their customers and does the best they can to achieve the best possible service they can provide," she said. "Once in a while it is nice to be appreciated."

April Haberyan
Haberyan has worked at Northwest for 13 years. She is an associate professor in the Psychology, Sociology and Counseling department.
"I am very honored to have received this recognition," she said.

Gayle Hull
Hull has worked at Northwest for 24 years. She works in the KXCV (the University radio station) office as the Membership and Promotions Director.
"I was in complete shock when I saw that," she said. "I did not expect that at all."

Lori Mardis
Mardis has worked at Northwest for seven years. She is currently an information librarian.
"I don't think any of us are irreplaceable but having people come to you if they need assistance and leaving with a lot more knowledge than when they came to you bring out the qualities of an indispensable woman," she said.

Louise Runde
Runde has worked at Northwest for 11 years. She currently works in the Environmental Services department.
"I was very surprised because I consider this award a big honor," she said. "When I think of all the working women on campus, it is an honor that someone thought enough of me to nominate me."

Darla Runyon
Runyon has worked at Northwest for 10 years. She is currently working as the assistant director and curriculum design specialist in the Center for Information and Technology in Education office.
"An indispensable woman is someone who is a very big part of the environment in which they work in," she said. "They are someone that people turn to and know they will get work accomplished when they turn to them."

Kim Todd
Todd has worked at Northwest for 10 years. She works as a Client Computing User Consultant in the Information Systems Department.
"I'm honored and humbled to be considered an indispensable woman of Northwest, especially in the company of such outstanding women as my fellow honorees," she said.

HIGH SCHOOL

Team set for District Speech and Debate

By Kenny Larabee
Community News Editor

They spend countless hours preparing after school, analyzing what their opponent might throw at them and what they'll do to react. Their teammates and coach have helped them prepare for this trial.

Their nerves freeze and their mind races. The pressure is intense against the piercing glances of the crowd.

It might sound like an athletic event, but it's not. It is however, intense competition.

Several students from Maryville High School will represent their school when they compete in the Northwest MSHSAA District Speech and Debate Tournament Friday and Saturday in St. Joseph.

Speech and Debate is one of the extracurricular activity offered at MHS. And while members of the squad spend time after school to further sharpen their minds, the team also provides a social atmosphere that attracts a special kind of student, Trudy Kinman, MHS National Forensics League (NFL) Speech and Debate Team coach, said.

"I get the best and the brightest," Kinman said. "You kind of have a mix between people who like drama, theatre, acting and expressing and I call it right brain people. And you have a mix with left brain, very intelligent math and science kids who want to use their brain to debate."

The team participates in debates and events such as prose, poetry, oratory and duet acting among several others. They just finished up two weekends of action: the first consisting of NFL debates and the second featuring individual events.

For debates, an example of a topic might be "Is vigilantism justified when the government has failed?" At tournaments, either teams of two or individuals debate against four other teams or individuals, presenting a case for each side of the argument twice. Participants advance based on a judge's decision.

Public speaking might be a deathly fear for some, but senior Andrew Christian said he usually has bigger concerns when he debates.

"It's not really hard to get up in front of people so much, it's just the fact that you get up there and debate and you have to sway that one judge who might have an opinion and you don't know what it is," Christian said. "It's really hard if you know that you won it and he voted the other way."

Getting up in front of people can open up new paths, freshman Ashton Corson said.

"You learn a lot about what you can do as a person because if you never thought you could get up in front of other people and talk, then you learn that you can, and you can do all sorts of different things," Corson said.

Not only do you learn about yourself, but you learn from others as well, senior Angela Protzman said.

Seeing an idea from one student can give another student a fresh perspective.

"People write speeches and oratory about a lot of weird things and a lot of really cool things too," Protzman said. "So you learn a lot."

The team has had some success in what they do as well. Ali Ackman and Bree Skipper were MEC Champions in Duet Acting, while Cody Proctor was a conference champion in Storytelling. Serena Troshynski finished seventh in the Lincoln-Douglas Debate category during the competition on the weekend of March 6 and 7.

Preparation can vary, but Skipper said regardless, it's a lot of work.

"For some events it's a lot harder. You have to be more into it. Like oratory and debate especially, you really have to put forth a lot of time and a lot of preparation because it's such a big event," Skipper said. "But some of the smaller events like prose and poetry, they also have a lot of time because you have to do more acting in it than just speaking. You have to get your actions, emotions, voices and characters all down."

Kinman said she gets a lot of satisfaction from watching students bond and that she thinks the program has a lot of merit.

"I like this program," Kinman said. "Every school I've been, I try to keep this program going or started or innovated because it's all about communication. And face it, there's not as much communication going on in the world as there needs to be."

"I have a tendency to think that the more we communicate and the more people learn how to talk and relate, the better off they're going to be."

Maryville electric bills could rise by 13.6 percent

By Kenny Larabee
Community News Editor

Residents in western Missouri and eastern Kansas, including Maryville, could soon see a rise in their electric bills.

That's because Kansas City Power and Light (KCP&L) and its parent company — Great Plains Energy — has asked the Missouri Public Service Commission (MPSC) to approve $257.5 million in rate increases across five different service areas across the region.

It breaks down to a 13.6 percent increase totaling $17.1 million for residents in the area around Maryville and St. Joseph formerly served by Aquila.

For the average customer, that amounts to roughly an extra $10 a month in their electric bill, according to Chuck Caisley, KCP&L Senior Director of Public Affairs said.

KCP&L filed a request with the MPSC last September. The MPSC and its staff, which includes auditors, engineers and economists, is in the process of reviewing the application, Lewis Mills, Public Counsel with the MPSC, said.

"The way rates are set is that the utility company basically gets to recover all of the prudent expenses that it incurs to provide service, plus a profit on the investments they've made into their facilities that are used to provide service," Mills said. "The disagreement over how much profit they should make on that investment almost always amounts to the biggest issue in any electric utility rate case. And I think it will be the same for this case."

Part of the review process includes holding public hearings, which ended last Thursday.

One thing was clear from those meetings, Mills said.

"We heard from a lot of people," Mills said. "Many of them understood that it may be necessary to have some small rate increase just to keep up with increased operating costs, but almost uniformly everyone was just aghast at the notion of a 14 percent or 17 percent increase in these economic times."

There are two primary reasons the company is asking for the rate increase, Caisley said.

"There are really two drivers of our rate increase request. The first driver is federally mandated environmental upgrades which we are doing in advance of the required date to have them installed," Caisley said. "The second thing is just general increases in operations and expenses."

"The cost of doing business has escalated for us."

Depending on where a customer lives, KCP&L's rates are 25 to 30 percent lower than the national average, Caisley said. The company is also working with customers to improve their energy efficiency and has asked the MPSC to approve a low-income pilot program to help with rising costs, he said.

Caisley attended the public hearings and said he was well aware of customer concerns, but ultimately the increase was needed to continue to provide customers with power.

"We don't ever relish having to ask for a rate increase," Caisley said. "And yet this is money that we have spent and invested in environmental upgrades mandated by the federal government. While we don't like asking for it, we understand there's a lot of pain. It's something that we have to do in order to provide service."

A five-member panel with the MPSC will ultimately decide what rate increase, if any, the commission will pass, Mills said. Those hearings are scheduled for May 11-15 in Jefferson City.

Although the public hearings have ended, residents in the area affected by the rate increase can still offer feedback through writing, at the commission's Web site at Psc.mo.gov or by phone at 1-866-922-2959.

OUR VIEW

Bond proposal would improve campus quality

There is really nothing wrong with having more students on campus; they bring new revenue to the University, which is especially important in these troubling economic times.
In fact, this year, if Missouri Gov. Jay Nixon's plan to freeze Northwest's 2009 state funding at 2008 levels goes ahead as planned, students alone would be providing any of the institution's new revenue.
The problem with a major enrollment increase here is, of course, it's effect on a campus that's not really built for one. With Northwest locked into, and so far achieving, a five-year plan to increase enrollment by 20 percent, the need for more space is becoming urgent.

Plans are in the works for the construction of both a new residence hall and new academic building. However, the latter of the two projects needs funding to get off the ground – funding that can only come from the state of Missouri.

The good news is that the money is there. Lawmakers are currently reviewing a plan to issue $700 million in bonds to complete priority construction projects on college and university campuses around the state. Northwest's $19.6 million academic building is one of those.
But if the measure passes the General Assembly, it will be up to Missourians to vote it into reality. Whether it comes up in the 2010 election or a specially designated one this year, we will be asked to either throw our support behind the expansion of higher education, or leave it to fend for itself.

The Northwest Missourian supports the first option. This recession won't last forever – though some days it might seem so – and society must be able to produce a high-quality workforce when it does end. That's where colleges and universities come in; they are the parties responsible for stimulating the minds and building the skills of the post-recession generation.

So keep this proposal in mind as it works its way through Jefferson City, and if it lands on the ballot, remember this: for Northwest, more academic space can help play a big part in offsetting this enrollment increase. More seats for students and more office space for faculty means, quite simply, a higher quality-learning environment.
And there is really nothing wrong with that, either.

MY VIEW

Obama could learn a thing or two about international gifts

In the course of rigorous scrutiny and discussion regarding the new administration's leadership and policy, there have been and will be countless opportunities to apply insightful adjectives to our glorious leader, some positive, some negative. I never thought "tacky" would be one of them.
There occurred in American foreign policy two gift faux pas in one day – bungled gifts to the Russians and the British.
The administration demonstrated what the minority of Americans already knew: they're amateurs. British Prime Minister Brown praised America in his Joint Address to Congress describing us as an "inspiration" and admiring the partnership between the UK and the U.S. as "unbreakable," declaring that "no power on Earth can ever draw [them] apart."
Brown and Obama exchanged gifts last week as a testament to tradition when a new U.S. Administration takes over. Brown provided Obama with an ornamental pen holder, made from the timbers of the anti-slave ship HMS Gannet – the sister ship to that of which the oval office desk was made from, the HMS Resolute, as well as a first edition set of the seven volume biography of Winston Churchill.

These gifts were nice, historic and "priceless," symbolizing the U.S.-Anglo alliance.
However, the thoughtful gesture did not seem to be reciprocated. In turn, Obama was seemingly less generous and thoughtful in his gift giving. Our leader presented the British Head of Government with 25 classic American films on DVD. Not only is Brown known to be less than a film buff, he's blind in the left eye. I always believed that true gift-giving, although everybody says "it's the thought that counts," is supposed to please the recipient. On top of this, Obama chose to forego the usual joint press conference and unceremoniously returned the bust of Churchill, which was given to the Bush Administration post Sept. 11.

Natalie Bell
Contributing Columnist

What of the rhetoric about improving how the world views America during his campaign? A DVD set is what you would give your family or friends, not a G8 leader. But maybe it shouldn't have been unexpected. As a former "community organizer," Obama has sufficiently demonstrated that he knows nothing about the basics of foreign policy and relations.
On the other hand, Obama has been speaking out against "frivolous spending" for months now. Perhaps the point was to give the prime minister a gift representing some of the best America has to offer entertainment-wise instead of an overpriced trinket in the midst of an economic crisis.
But what of Hillary Clinton's blunder? The secretary of state visited with Foreign Minister of Russia, Sergei Lavrov, as a gesture designed to reconstruct relations between the two countries that had, in recent years, grown somewhat testy. What was supposed to be a play on Biden's remark that it is "time to press the reset button on Russian-American relations," the gift Clinton presented was embarrassing. Clinton presented the Lavrov with a box with a button on it and a sign that read "reset" in Russian, or at least that's what the Americans thought it said. Instead they used the word that means "overcharge."

One should question if these diplomats are a bit out of their league. They've demonstrated their inexperience by assuming that the U.S.-Russian interests will change overnight with the simple push of a button.
It makes you wonder what other interesting bloopers we'll enjoy during the next four years. The only thing is, somebody will have to come up with another euphemism similar to that of a "Bushism."

Education system needs help, and fast

Once again, President Obama stands by his vow of change with the new reform initiative of the education system, a system that is flawed and failing the American people.
Education is one of the most important factors in society at large. Our attitudes and actions are guided by the quality of education received, which in turn greatly affects the quality of life we lead, be that monetarily, intellectually, or socially.
Knowledge is power, and the American society is lacking in this field with an extremely outdated system that leaves us in the dust compared to other industrial countries, and fails to meet the needs of a society that depends so heavily on our increasing globalization.
It is so hard to reverse the effects of a great number of students falling through the cracks, allowed by the students themselves, parents of the students and the administrators of the institutions. Responsibility and accountability fails to be a factor in all three groupings.
Students blame teachers for bad grades, and parents bristle at anything pointing at a less than perfect child. Administrators and teachers either don't have the resources to do much of what is needed, or just don't take the time. Our system is faced with the main objective of pushing as many students through as possible. The quality of the education received isn't even a main factor. And this occurs at all levels, starting at early childhood and continues through higher education.
Critical thinking? There is no such thing in our classrooms. Learning is based not on independent thought, but on regurgitation of material. This is an excellent environment to an overly controlling government which makes empty drones out of its citizens. But to the people, this is the most dangerous thing. This lack of enabling and encouraging our students to think for themselves, to formulate their own ideas and opinions, or to build upon former ideas is a pretty good way at allowing the rise of corruption in government and the society a government is built upon.
So what is to be done to secure the future of our democratic country?
There needs to be responsibility and accountability, in all levels of the system, in all members of the system, starting with students and parents, teachers, and the administrators themselves.
There is no reason for our students to be falling through the cracks. There is no reason for increasingly uneducated generations that are receiving more years of education than previous generations. There is no reason why knowledge itself should be put on the back burner as it is today.
There is nothing more dangerous to a society than a failing education system. And our education system is failing the youth it serves, and it's failing fast.

CAMPUS TALK

Should Northwest become 100 percent smoke-free?

I think that a smoke-free environment would give the school a positive image for future students.

Amanda Schulte-Smith
Journalism

I think that Northwest would be a better college for going smoke free. It's a little strange that a campus known for trees isn't smoke free, so I am all for it.

Dustin Simmons
Business Management

I think this would be great for people like me that do not like smoke.

Jacelyn Stahl
Family and Consumer Sciences Education

I think it's a bad idea because people should be able to smoke if they want to and I don't think the school should have the right to take that choice away.

Olivia Clark

I think that this is a great idea. It would be nice to be able to walk into building without walking through the smoke.

VILLA: Proposal needs funds for exchange program

Seizing opportunity, Tappmeyer wasted no time: while recovering from surgery in Panama, she hooked up with the creator of Northwest's Panamanian student exchange, Debbie Psychoyos. The new friendship sparked the idea for a similar partnership between Maryville and Villa Sandino, Nicaragua, two towns that share a special place in Tappmeyer's heart — and a striking parallel in nicknames.

Plans for the "Villa 2 Ville Initiative" have sharpened in the eight months that passed.

Tappmeyer said that upon returning to Nicaragua to teach language and small business development skills, she has witnessed a culture that can't think in terms of the future due to the severity of its past.

Working with the help of university contact Jeffery Foot, Tappmeyer is proposing an intensive two-week leadership and language-training program at Northwest for 12 high school students from Nicaragua. While staying with Maryville host families, the students would enhance their English skills and graduate from a specialized workshop at the Missouri Academy with tools that can help them step out of complacency and take charge of their future.

"With 53 percent of the country's population under the age of 18, the youth of Nicaragua are one of its best untapped resources," said Tappmeyer.

For now, Tappmeyer is keeping the project a secret from the 4,000 residents in her small town until she can guarantee the program will meet fund raising goals of $50,000.

"Without the money, I don't want to offer this program to the students and have to negate it," said Tappmeyer. "I don't want to get their hopes up."

Currently, Phi Sigma Kappa and Phi Mu have committed to raising funds for one student. Ideally, Tappmeyer would like to see 11 more pledges like this.

According to Foot, the project is gaining momentum in the community but is still in the proposal phase with no finalizations set.

Tappmeyer hopes that with more funding the project can move forward within the next couple months in order to reach the anticipated program date of January 2010. She believes the intercultural exchange will benefit both communities who would learn not only from their diversity, but also their likeness.

"I do kind of feel the town that I'm living in is like a little Maryville: it's stuck in the middle of the country, kind of like Missouri," said Tappmeyer. "Like Maryville, it's a small farming town and the people even call it 'La Villa' which is 'The Ville' in Spanish."

Tappmeyer has fallen for the contrasting vibrancy and simple nature she finds in the warmth of the Nicaraguan culture. The way 'La Villa' has fully accepted her in a community where she is one of two Anglo-Saxons, reminds her of home.

"Maryville is always my community and I always felt embraced by it," she said. "I'd love to do an exchange and with all the community resources together we can make that happen."

DAU: Speaker says Americans can help

he spoke about the story of his survival. In 1987, Dau's village was attacked and he was separated from his family. He was forced to travel, with others, for three months of walking until they reached the safety of Ethiopia.

"My body was cracking, some of the boys wanted to stay and die," he said in his speech Tuesday night.

When they traveled to Ethiopia, they were treated much better, and their lives were improving until four years later, when the Ethiopian government was overthrown by the southern Sudanese.

He was again forced to leave. Dau, along with thousands of "Lost Boys of Sudan" traveled for hundreds of more miles. In that time they were without food, water or protection from disease or enemy soldiers.

He then described his time in Kenya, and how they were helpful.

Dau originally arrived in the United States in 2001 along with 3,800 other Sudanese refugees.

When he arrived in the U.S. he started working at McDonald's, UPS and as a security guard before he enrolled in a community college, and eventually Syracuse University.

In 2003, Dau launched The Sudanese Lost Boys Foundation of Central New York. He raised more than $35,000 for Sudanese refugees living in the United States.

He stepped down from that organization to launch The American Care for Sudan Foundation in 2005. Funds from this organization helped to create Duk Lost Boys Clinic in southern Sudan, and raised more than $400,000 for the clinic.

He later launched the John Dau Foundation, which opened its first medical clinic in southern Sudan in May 2007. In its nearly two years of existence, the clinics have treated 18,000 people and provided postnatal care to numerous mothers before and after giving birth. Dau said the mission of the foundation is ongoing.

"My mission is to transform healthcare in southern Sudan ... before there was nothing at all, little amount of care in big cities and none in rural area," Dau said. "We will build more clinics because it is needed."

But Dau believes his best work will be completed by staying in the United States, not returning to live in Sudan.

"I am here, I can help more than if I return," he said.

His message to Northwest students was simple.

"If you are going through a lot of problems, don't ever give up," Dau said. "America is great, it's where anyone can thrive."

He doesn't hold anger against any specific mass of people for what happened to him, and said he relies on God and doesn't believe in revenge.

"I never gave up ... I struggled and fought through," Dau said. "To become successful, you have to give back to your community."

Dau's gratitude toward America was evident when he said, "I did make it, I live the American dream."

PARADE: Tradition draws national visitors

guests from places like Colorado, Texas, Iowa and Florida were present to take in the brief procession of people and vehicles, which included crowd pleasers like the "Git-R-Done Bus" and the traditional cement truck that showers the pavement with green water.

"Every year the concrete truck goes by and somebody jumps under the water and no one was jumping," said Colby James Chestnut. "I was like 'What the heck?' so I had to be the one."

Chestnut said that those who didn't make it were "missing out on a pretty rocking time" and over the spirited hoots and hollers festive parade watchers agreed.

With shamrock antennae springing from her hair, Sherri Judy of Florida gave the parade overwhelming approval.

"I love it," she said, cheering to her favorite float — a Cadillac convertible throwing green neckties.

First-time parade goer Mickenzie Hagen thought the parade "was cool for how long it lasted." Hagen didn't catch any prizes, but didn't mind getting hit by a piece of candy either.

On the other hand, the luck of the Irish was with Gerald Elder of Kansas City, who caught no less than two different parade prizes.

Thompson said in his ninth year of ownership, the parade was another success with especially wonderful weather. He invites those who came to return for a slightly shorter parade next year and reminds those who missed out, there will still be plenty of room for fun.

ECONOMY: 'Open mind' crucial

She said the best idea for new job seekers is to keep an open mind and look at all options.

"Educate yourself on your options, ask yourself what you can do with this major," Schneider said, "and constantly seek it out."

Some graduate schools in the country are beginning to see an increase in enrollment and more students are going straight to graduate school after their undergraduate degree. At Northwest it's too soon to tell.

"It will be a while before we know if the economy is having an impact," said Gregory Haddock, dean of Northwest's graduate school.

Although, Haddock does say they are starting to see what could be an enrollment trend.

"Already we're starting to see a decrease in enrollment," Haddock said. "We saw international students dropped slightly, about 10 percent."

He also said Northwest's graduate school saw a decrease in applications last fall but registration numbers are higher.

Haddock notes that many jobs affected by the recession, such as factory jobs, don't typically impact Northwest graduates.

"There will always be a need in education and healthcare," Haddock said, which are two of the largest programs that the grad school has to offer.

GOVERNOR: University looks to lead

first steps towards economic recovery," Biggs said. "I hope Northwest can take an active role in helping lead growth in that area."

Northwest not only saves money every year, but the university earns money for Missouri, Nixon said.

"Northwest is an example of having a couple of decades to work and is a clear example of what should be a shining example to move forward," Nixon said.

Making more buildings energy efficient will create more jobs, Nixon said.

"A lot of folks a long time ago decided to do this when there weren't tax credits, when everyone wasn't talking green, when there wasn't an energy investment," Nixon said. "The process that is now mentally matured really forms a baseline to where we can go from here."

Top 3 picks

By Marshall Carlson

New album released — Former Primus bassist and lead vocalist Les Claypool released his new all-original album on Tuesday entitled “Of Fungi and Foe.” Claypool has been reshaping the music industry since the mid ‘80s with his signature eccentric sound and his bizarre attitude during his live shows. “Of Fungi and Foe” marks his latest release since 2006’s “Of Whales and Woe,” where Claypool played a multitude of instruments not typical in modern rock. The 12-track album is sure to include the many talents of Claypool, featuring his mastery of the bass guitar.

New DVD released — The ever popular book turned movie “Twilight” will be released to DVD this Saturday. The movie is based on the best-selling romance novel by Stephenie Meyer. When Bella Swan’s mother decides to remarry, Swan decides to go live with her father in Washington. It is here that she falls in love with Edward Cullen (Robert Pattinson, “Harry Potter”). Cullen seems to be absolutely perfect in every way, except one. He’s a vampire. He is still attracted to the scent of Swan, and must resist his thirst. Cullen must fight against this for the sake of love.

New movie hitting theaters — Coming to theaters tomorrow is “Knowing.” The thriller stars Nicholas Cage (“National Treasure”) as Professor John Koestler. At a dedication ceremony for a new elementary school in 1958, students placed pictures they had drawn in a time capsule. One girl decided to fill her paper with random numbers instead. Fifty years later when the capsule is uncovered, this numbered paper winds up in the hands of Caleb Koestler (Chandler Canterbury, “The Curious Case of Benjamin Button”), whose father, Prof. Koestler, examines it. Koestler finds that these numbers actually tells when and where each disaster has taken place over the last 50 years, plus an additional three more still to come.

I really think that people no longer know what a crosswalk is or how to use one.

On a daily basis, I see hundreds of pedestrians crossing the street wherever they feel like, instead of using crosswalks. I know it sounds petty to complain about, but seriously, it’s not a parade.

I am sick and tired of people walking all over the place. Around nine in the morning it never fails, droves of people flooding the streets. It takes longer to drive through campus than it does for me to shower.

This could easily be avoided if people stayed on the path. They made the crosswalks and put in fancy new stop signs for a reason.

Think if we all took the most convenient route with our cars. You would see me parked at the front door of Wells Hall every day. The agriculture students would probably be out mudding on the bell tower lawn in their pickups.

Hey, this could actually fix the parking problem. Nobody wants to see grass anyways. It could all be one giant street/parking lot. I’m a genius!

What I am getting at is that this would result in total chaos. And that is exactly the situation we have, countless people mindlessly wandering in the middle of the street. There is no rhyme or reason to the madness.

The iPod doesn’t help. You aren’t be able to hear anything that is about to hit you. And I’m pretty sure that the “if you get hit you get school paid for” thing is a myth. You would obviously get insurance money, but I doubt the University actually waives tuition. It just sounds silly to me.

So students walk wherever they please, with total disregard to an unwritten rule. That rule is to keep things flowing. Campus should get “walk” and “don’t walk” signs. Drivers and walkers would finally be equal.

Too bad that will never happen. Some things never change.

Call me lazy for driving instead of walking. Call me rude for complaining. But from now on, you are all fair game. If you aren’t in a crosswalk, I will hit you. Learn the rules.

The Stroller has been a tradition since 1918 and does not reflect the views of The Northwest Missourian.

‘Milk’ does movie-goers good; Oscar-winner Penn ‘completely transformed’

By Brian Johnson
Entertainment Reporter

His name was Harvey Milk and he recruited me. “Milk,” starring Sean Penn, made a huge impact on viewers and critics alike including this critic.

“Milk” follows the incredible life of the first openly gay man elected to public office. More specifically, elected to the position of state supervisor in San Francisco.

With Gus Van Sant (“Good Will Hunting”) directing, this raw and revealing look at the world of the gay rights movement of the 1970s is truly a spectacle. This movie didn’t rely on special effects or flashy cinematography however, just incredible acting.

The Oscar-winning role of Penn as Milk is obviously the first incredible role that comes to mind, but there are other noteworthy roles to consider in this film. Emile Hirsch certainly deserved an Oscar nomination for his role as gay activist Clive Jones.

The role that really amazed me just as much as Penn’s was the always amazing Josh Bro-lin. He plays the troubled state supervisor Dan White who has a culture clash with Milk when forced to work with him. This was undoubtedly one of Brolin’s most accomplished roles and showed his chameleon-like acting ability.

Surprisingly, the movie held nothing back when it came to showcasing the gay community. Yes, there are men kissing and no, I wasn’t repulsed. This is as real as that world was and I respect this movie so much for doing that.

When Penn won the Oscar for Best Actor for this role, at that point I had not seen the movie. I was absolutely convinced that Mickey Rourke was going to win for “The Wrestler.”

However, after seeing this movie, I can see why Penn received the Oscar. He had the role of his career and certainly showed that he is one of the most talented actors of his generation.

What really sells good acting to me is when I forget who is playing the role. This means they have completely transformed themselves into the role. Heath Ledger in “The Dark Knight” did this, Daniel Day Lewis did this in “There Will Be Blood” and Penn did this in “Milk.”

“Milk” was one of the best films of 2008 and certainly surprised this critic. From the humble beginnings of Milk’s political life to the heartbreaking climax, you will love every moment of this movie. Moreover, the movie transcends political films and gay-themed films and at the heart, shows a simple man who wanted to change his world; and succeeded.

Disabled golfer sheds some light on how we live our life

We all have those people who send us those forwarded junk e-mails that we really don't care about.

Well for me, that's my grandma. Most of the time she sends me dumb e-mails of things like Barack Obama Photoshopped into Dancing with the Stars or of course, my daily Nebraska football updates. Every now and then though, she'll send me something great, which was the case yesterday when I opened my e-mail and learned the story of DJ Gregory.

His story makes me want to work harder and never give up in anything I do. DJ was born with cerebral palsy and entangled legs. Doctors told his parents he would never walk. By the time he was in first grade, he had already endured five surgeries on his legs. Over time, through dedication and physical therapy, DJ could walk with the help of a cane.

As a boy growing up, he loved sports, but could never participate because a of huge limp he had and the cane that makes walking a possibility for DJ. He fell in love with the only sport that gave him a chance.

He began golfing when he was nine years old. DJ developed his own swing, balancing his body with his cane in one hand and swinging the club using his other hand. He struggles around the course shooting scores from 105 to 115, but his high score don't deter him from the game he loves.

Along with playing the game, his love for following the PGA grew as well. DJ's dad took him to his first tournament in Greensborough, N.C. in 1990. It was there that CBS sports commentator Ken Venturi brought him up to the announcers' booth to talk on his show. Venturi introduced DJ to his colleague Jim Nantz and the two instantly bonded. Nantz continued to have DJ join him in the announcers' booth at golf events over the next years.

Nantz encouraged DJ to conquer another goal that seemed out of reach. DJ followed his advice and received a master's degree in sports management from Springfield College in Massachusetts. One thing stayed constant in DJ's life, golf. From golf, DJ thought up a dream. A dream that seemed impossible for a man who had trouble walking. His goal was to walk every hole of every round of every golf tournament in a year. Venturi tried explaining to DJ that not even a golfer will walk in every tournament in a complete year, but that didn't stop him.

With the help of Nantz and the PGA, his dream came true and during his quest, he decided to follow a different golfer every week, interviewing him for a blog he created.

Brian Bosiljvac
University Sports Editor

Due to the cerebral palsy DJ suffered from overlapped toes applying tremendous force to his feet when he walked. For DJ to accomplish his goal, he would be walking in 44 tournaments, 180 rounds of golf, three thousand 256 holes, and over 900 miles within 45 weeks.

During the course of DJ's unfathomable journey, he fell and fell often, more than 24 times.

"If I fall, I fall," DJ said in an interview with ESPN. "It's just another challenge. I'm going to fall it's just the way it is. I'm going to do it. So, you know, you get back up and learn from your mistakes and you don't do it again."

As the golfing calendar began to move forward, so did DJ and the level of support he gained, especially from the golfers he was following. It started as curiosity and over time grew into admiration for DJ. PGA golfer Kenny Perry was the first to request that DJ follow him during a round. Perry felt what DJ was doing was amazing and wanted a chance to meet the kid who could have given up years ago, but kept struggling through life, reaching any goals he wished to. Perry credits DJ for changing his perspective not only on his golf game, but on his life.

"How can you see a kid struggle around the golf course and then you're out there complaining, playing golf," Perry said on an ESPN interview.

DJ described a challenge as something that possibly no one thinks you can do, but in your own mind you know you can do it.

I know I will probably never face the same challenges DJ has seen and I am thankful for that, but at the same time I wonder how I would handle the amount of adversity he has seen. It would be so easy to just give up and let your life waste away, while people around you pitied your inconvenience. Or would I, like DJ, put my obstacles out of sight and let determination be my guide to achieving the goals that no one would think are possible?

After watching DJ's story, I began to think of how many times a day I complain about my "stressful" life. I don't have near the stress, that DJ faces everyday and yet he has found a way to do things many people only dream of. I think it's stories like these that are used as wake up calls to the people like me, privileged people who don't realize all they have in life. These kind of stories need to not only make us thankful for what we have, but light a fire under us to work harder and achieve greater things because of the advantages we are given.

SPORTS STAFF GAME PICKS

Woody's picks

Prediction record (15-20)

NCAA First Round Lock

Purdue vs N. Iowa — Purdue

A lot of experts think a 12 seed will upset a five seed, but this pick is safe. The MVC champ doesn't have enough in them to take down the Boilermakers.

NCAA First Round Upset

Cornell vs Mizzou — Cornell

I have been picking Ivy league games all year and everyone has cried about it. It's tough to pick against my Tigers, but I need this upset to prove to everyone that the Ivy League is a legitimate conference.

NBA Lock

Golden State at Lakers — Lakers

The Los Angeles Lakers are one of the best, if not the best team in the NBA. I'm not a huge Kobe fan, but you can't deny he hits some unbelievable shots. He can just flat out play and the Warriors can't.

NBA Upset

Lakers at Chicago — Bulls

This game I'm hoping will be decided by who has the most passion. The Lakers don't really have any worries headed into post-season, but the bulls are fighting for that eighth spot.

Brian "The Bulldog's" picks

Prediction record (15-20)

NCAA First Round Lock

Florida St. vs Wisconsin — FSU

A lot of people don't think my 'Noles will last long in the tourney. But they have been underrated all year and it hasn't stopped them yet.

NCAA First Round Upset

W. Kentucky vs Illini — Kent.

The Hilltoppers made the upset as a 12 seed last year and I think they will do it again. Illinois hasn't had a horrible season, but they certainly aren't great and are vulnerable for the upset. Plus, how could you pick against a team named the Hilltoppers?

NBA Lock

Lakers at Chicago — Lakers

The Bulls pulled the St. Patty's Day upset in Boston. I don't think Kobe and the Lakers are going to make the same mistake, but they better watch out; the Bulls are starting to catch fire.

NBA Upset

Knicks at Orlando — Knicks

New York has appeared to wake up and play basketball. Somehow they have found an opportunity to slide into the playoffs. So every game is important to the Knicks.

Jason's picks

Prediction record (15-21)

NCAA First Round Lock

KU vs North Dakota St ate— KU

I have to pick really safe now since I'm falling more and more each week. I know KU has lost to a 14 seed before, but I'm hoping Bill Self has them prepared for this stage of the season. Rock Chalk Jayhawk!

NCAA First Round Upset

California vs Maryland — Terps
Grevis Vasquez will lead a young Maryland team against a great shooting, guard-heavy Cal team. Vasquez will have to play like he did in upsets of Duke and UNC for Maryland to go anywhere in the tournament.

NBA Lock

Atlanta at Cleveland— Cavs

The LeBrons, I mean Cavaliers, are making that final push to try and lock up the one seed in the East, and a win over another playoff team will bode well for them.

NBA Upset

Denver at Phoenix — Suns

Phoenix's offense is scorching and Denver has already secured a playoff spot. The Suns have to win out and hope Dallas loses to get in. They just need this one more.

Dustin's picks

Prediction record (22-13)

NCAA First Round Lock

Mizzou vs Cornell — Mizzou

It's the No. 14 seed playing the best No. 3 seed in the tournament - the Tigers will roll over the Big Red. I picked Mizzou to make it to the Final Four in the west region, so of course I have to pick this game as my lock.

NCAA First Round Upset

WVU vs Dayton — Dayton

One of my good high school buddies goes to Dayton so I've heard my fair share about Flyers' basketball. Chris Wright and Marcus Johnson are two amazing weapons the Flyers have in their arsenal.

NBA Lock

New York at Orlando— Orlando

I grew up being a huge Magic fan with Shaq and Penny Hardaway and now the one two punch is back in Orlando with Dwight Howard and Jameer Nelson. Plus I'm excited to see 5'9" Nate Robinson go up against Howard again.

NBA Upset

OKC at Minn — OKC

Anytime the Thunder wins it's an upset. They just knocked off the spurs so the Wolves should be no problem.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Meridee Scott moves the ball up the court in their quarterfinal matchup with defending state champions Skyline. Scott led the Spoofhounds with 15 points in a 56-54 double-overtime loss.

Girls fall one shot short of trip to Columbia

By Jason Lawrence
Asst. Sports Editor

One shot made all the difference in Maryville's 56-54 double-overtime loss to defending state champion Skyline in the quarterfinals on Saturday at Staley High School in Kansas City, Mo. "I thought we had them there at the end," head coach Grant Hageman said. "It was a great game and a lot of fun. It's just one of those games where nobody deserves to lose and whoever ends up with the ball last is usually going to be the victor." With just seconds remaining in the initial overtime, Skyline's Deidre Parks hit a 16-foot jumper to send the game to a second overtime. The Spoofhounds couldn't recover like they had been doing all game. They needed just one more bounce to go their way and they would have been going to Columbia, Hageman said. "If the ball bounces our way one more time then we're probably there," Hageman said. "We would probably be feeling a lot differently than we do right now." The 'Hounds got only seven points in the first quarter and fell behind 14-7 heading into the second quarter. Maryville fought back and tied the game at halftime after Shannon McClellan ripped a rebound away from a Skyline player and hit a lay-up as time expired. Megan Walker gave the Spoofhounds their first lead of the game after she was fouled on a lay-up at the beginning of the third quarter. She hit the free throw to put the 'Hounds up 25-24. Five ties and eight lead changes would occur in the remaining quarter and overtime periods. Maryville went into the fourth quarter trailing by four, but Meridee Scott hit all eight of her free-throw attempts, including two that knotted it up at 41, to send the game into an extra period. "That's Meridee," Hageman said. "She's one of our best free throw shooters, and one of the best I've ever coached. We like the ball in her hands because if you come and foul her she's going to make you pay for it. She made some big plays down the stretch." The Spoofhounds were ahead by two with less than eight seconds left when Parks hit the shot that tied the game at 49 and sent it into the second overtime. "We really put ourselves in a position to win the ball game," Hageman said. "They had to come out and make a play and one of their best players came out and hit a shot. She made a play when she had to because they were down to their final shot." The girls hung in throughout the second overtime and cut the lead to one with 13 seconds left, but they were forced to foul after their attempt at a steal failed. Skyline hit one of two free throws, keeping the Spoofhounds' hopes alive. In the waning seconds, the 'Hounds couldn't get a good look and time ran out on the game and their season. The 'Hounds finished the year with a 20-8 record, but none of the losses hurt as much as this one, Hageman said.

"It hurts because we set a pretty lofty goal at the beginning of the year to make it to Columbia," Hageman said. "There's a lot of teams that don't even set goals like that because it makes it hurt that much more, but I wouldn't go back and change that goal so it doesn't hurt so much right now. There's a lot to be proud of. These girls worked hard to get to Columbia this year and they deserve to go there." Scott led the Spoofhounds with 15 points. Walker added 12 points in the loss. Maci Wisdom led Skyline with a game-high 28 points. It's too early to start looking forward to next year, Hageman said, but he did say that the goal of getting to Columbia would be in place once again. "They've had a great year," Hageman said. "They have nothing to be ashamed of to play a game like that against a great team. I'm proud of all the girls." Maryville returns 12 of 15 girls next season that saw varsity playing time this year.

BOYS' GOLF

'Hounds hope to become more competitive, 13 new golfers double team's roster from last year

By Dustin Sander
Community Sports Editor

The Maryville boys' golf team looks for success with inflated numbers from last year. The Spoofhounds have 20 boys on the team this year. Last season they only had half that amount on the course. Maryville has several freshmen on the course and sophomores that decided to come out in their second year, head coach Brenda Ricks said. "Kids are more excited for golf this year," Ricks said. The 'Hounds have 13 new faces this season ranging from freshmen to juniors. "We've got some with experience and there's going to be some diamonds in the rough that we just don't know anything about," Ricks said. "I honestly don't know what I have; without being able to get on the range and with 20 boys." The 'Hounds will also have three varsity returners who are all sophomores, including state qualifier Tanner Reames who placed 90th out of 120 golfers. "Freshman year I was nervous but now I know some of the other guys from the other schools," Reames said. "It's easy to get along and a lot more of a relaxed atmosphere once you know what you're doing." All three returning sophomores; Reames, Trevor Shell and Matt Downing see this season as being much more relaxed. "It gives us a lot more experience, we know what to expect in competitions and know how to handle pressure," Shell said. Tuesday was the team's first chance to get on the driving range, but they have been playing on the course the last two weeks. When they haven't been on the course they have been at Maryville Middle School for practice indoors. "They've been out on the course, but when it comes to really working on the game you have to get on the range," Ricks said. "They were out when it was 38 degrees with a wind chill in the teens. They wanted to come out and play and they did, four of them finished nine holes ... The thing that I see is that everyone just wants to play golf." The 'Hounds will hold their first qualifying match in the 'Hound Challenge Monday and Tuesday night. Maryville's first regular season match will be at 4 p.m. March 26 in Smithville, Mo. against Smithville and Savannah.

ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

Tyler Shaw broke the 60 meter hurdles program record for the second time last weekend. His time of 8.06 beat his old time by .03 seconds and was good enough for second place in the NCAA Division II National Championships. Shaw also returned to Maryville as an All-American after just his freshman season.

Tyler Shaw

Emily returned from the NCAA Division II National Indoor Track Championship meet last weekend with All-American honors and an eighth place in the pentathlon. She set personal bests in four of her five events and totaled 3,504 points. She also tied for third in the long-jump. She is the first woman to place at National Indoor Track since 2005.

Emily Churchman

Megan Walker scored 12 points in the Spoofhounds' double overtime loss to Skyline in the quarterfinal round of the state tournament. Walker was a force for the 'Hounds all season long in the paint. Maryville lost 56-54 to Skyline. Walker gave the 'Hounds their first lead of the game when she was fouled early in the third.

Megan Walker

Taylor Gadbois

Gadbois was the second leading scorer for the Spoofhounds against Lawson with 10 points in the 51-42 victory. In the quarterfinal loss to defending state champion Skyline, Gadbois did all the little things not seen on a box score. She scored just two points, but helped slow down Skyline's post players and their all-state guard Maci Wisdom, in addition to controlling the glass.

CATCHER KREED KURTZ rounds third base to score early in the game. Kurtz had a walk-off single in the bottom of the 10th inning to give the 'Cats an 8-7 victory over Nebraska-Kearney.

Walk-off single gives 'Cats the win

By Christopher Woodland
Sports Editor

In the bottom of the 10th inning, Northwest catcher Kreed Kurtz found a pitch he liked and hit a walk-off single to give the Bearcats an 8-7 win over Nebraska-Kearney Tuesday night.

Jon Henne Jr. got on base with a single to start the 10th, and coach Northwest Darin Loe subbed Tim Avants for Henne as the pinch-runner.

After a Brandon Kirsch sacrifice bunt moved Avants to second, Avants stole third to set up the game-winning situation, and Kurtz ended the Bearcats' second extra-inning game in three days victoriously.

The win avenged a four-game, two-day series against Central Missouri in which the 'Cats dropped three games, two by one run each.

Heading into the Nebraska-Kearney game, fatigue seemed like it may play a role as Northwest just finished a pair of double-headers in a tough series with Central.

The 'Cats didn't come out particularly strong. They fell behind 7-4 through six innings despite a three-run third that featured a Jared Erspamer one-run homer.

However, after failing to produce runs late in games during the Central series, the 'Cats sticks came alive in the final four innings against Nebraska-Kearney, as they came back from a three-run deficit.

Both of Kurtz's hits came during his final two at-bats.

"I was just trying to battle," Kurtz said. "I was kind of going deep in counts, getting two strikes and just trying to fight them off and find a ball here and there."

Weather-related delays condensed the Central series to four games over a two-day period. The 'Cats and Mules split the first day's games in a pair of one-run games.

The first game was scheduled as a seven-inning game, but a pitching dual forced the game to 11 innings where Central escaped with a 3-2 decision.

Northwest only managed four hits in that game, but Bret Harvel matched the Mules' pitching staff as he went 6.2 innings and only allowed one earned run on three hits, while striking out five.

In Sunday's second game, Trevor Conner sent one out of the park in the third inning with the bases loaded to give the 'Cats all the points they would need to pick up the win. They won that game 4-3.

Northwest's sticks came alive early in both of Monday's games, but couldn't find their mark late in the game.

They produced a combined 10 runs during the first three innings of Monday's double-header, but managed just two runs in the remaining 10 innings.

A combined seven errors also plagued the 'Cats' Monday double-header.

In game one, they committed four errors but still found themselves tied 5-5 heading into the final inning. They lost that game 6-5.

Northwest travels to Washburn this weekend.

Bearcats overcome early struggles to knock off No. 17 Wayne St. Wildcats

By A.J. Martin
Missourian Reporter

The Bearcat softball team will tangle with arch rival Missouri Western on Friday, after splitting games with Wayne State College (Neb.) Tuesday.

Wayne State took the early 2-0 lead in the third inning after centerfielder Amy Sandstrom belted a two-run homerun. The 'Cats clawed their way back from a 2-0 deficit when senior Tiffany Carter drove in two runs with a double in the top of the sixth inning.

After a 1-2-3 inning for pitcher Cola Krueger, the stage was set for freshman Jennifer Bohle as she drove in the winning run with a single to right to defeat the 17th ranked Wildcats by a score of 3-2. Krueger earned her fourth win of the year by going all seven innings and only allowing two runs. She also struck out three, which brings her career total to 317.

However in the night game the 'Cats were not as lucky, dropping a close one by a score of 1-0.

Tiffany Carter leads the team in home runs (4), RBIs (26), and also batting average (.361). She hopes her success at the plate can translate to more success for her team.

"It is obviously important that I get production at the plate considering where I am in the order," Carter said.

Tomorrow, the 'Cats turn their attention to Missouri Western. Western has been on quite a hot streak, winning their last 14 games dating back to Feb. 20. Coach Ryan Anderson feels it is important to get these victories tomorrow as they battle the Griffons in a double header.

"The bottom line is we have got to get solid production from our lower part of the order if we are going to beat Missouri Western or anybody else for that matter," Anderson said. The games tomorrow will be at 3 and 5 p.m. The 'Cats will also be participating in the MWSU Ramada Inn Tournament, with their first game at 10 a.m. against Concordia-St. Paul (Minn.) and their second game getting started at noon against Upper Iowa University.

Bearcat women remain undefeated, men drop first match

By Dustin Sander

Both Northwest tennis teams had busy, yet successful weeks. The men played back to back matches on Friday and Saturday. Friday afternoon the Bearcats traveled to Bolivar, Mo. to face No. 12 Cameron University. The 'Cats fell to Cameron 6-3 but the team saw good signs from their match against such a high ranked team. "If we can play that well with a team like that it gives you confidence even with a loss," coach Mark

Rosewell said. "They've got a loaded team, they're solid one through six and we were playing right with them in singles and doubles too. It's really helped us playing them the day before Southwest Baptist as far as getting us relaxed to beat them." The men and women both played defending MIAA champions Southwest Baptist Saturday afternoon at home. Both teams knocked off the Purple Bearcats; the men won 6-3. "I think that it was awesome that we beat them they have a good team and we knew it would be really tough to beat them," Giovanni Auricchio said "We're going to play against them again and I think we can beat them and win the conference." The women beat Southwest Baptist 6-2. The women only played five singles matches; No. 2 Jordan Lipira won by forfeit after an injury to the Southwest Baptist team. The No. 39 ranked Northwest women are now undefeated and 2-0 in conference play. The No. 28 ranked men are 4-1 and 1-0 in conference. The busiest part of the 'Cats' season is approaching, playing matches six of the next seven days. "That's always our spring break we play a lot of matches," Rosewell said. "Hopefully we'll get match tough, that's what we call it, by playing a lot of tennis and with the weather like this I think we can play a lot." The 'Cats have been preparing for this week all season and off-season, Lipira said. "I've done it for the last three years so it's not going to be something new or something I'm not prepared for," Lipira said. The 'Cats kick off their busy week at 2 p.m. today in Kansas City, Mo. against Midwestern State.

Indoor track All-Americans

By Christopher Woodland

If you would have told Emily Churchman four years ago that she would be an All-American during college, she probably wouldn't have believed you. Last weekend though, Churchman, along with Tyler Shaw, did just that at the NCAA Division II Track and Field Championships in Houston. Shot putter Ben McKim also participated in the championships and walked away with a 10th place finish. "I wouldn't believed it at all (as a freshman)," Churchman said. "My freshman year was a struggle, but I guess hard work pays off." Churchman had to battle nerves before she was able to claim her place as an All-American. "It was just nerve racking being around all those girls that were already All-Americans and had been there before" Churchman said. "There were a lot of familiar faces there from the MIAA, girls that I'd competed against over the years, so it was kind of like a replay from conference." Churchman finished eighth in the pentathlon with 3,504 points. The eighth place finish and All-American status culminated an indoor season that saw the junior break the school pentathlon record three times. Shaw broke the Northwest 60-meter hurdles record with an 8.06, which earned him a second place finish and broke the 8.09 record he set earlier in the season. "Tyler coming in as a freshman, I was happy he made the finals," coach Scott Lorek said. "Then going into that final race, he ran so well and that was juts totally a bonus." Shaw's accomplishment is made more incredible since only one other hurdler in school history has received indoor All-American honors. He is the first to do so since 1990 and the first freshman to finish first or second in the 60-meter hurdles since 2005. The stage and atmosphere experienced in Houston last weekend was a little different than what the three Northwest participants were used to. "It was different because I wasn't used to all those people," Shaw said. "It was kind of exciting, I had a lot of adrenaline." Before running the record-breaking 8.06, Shaw listened while he warmed up to music to drown out the distractions he said. Ben McKim also made the trip to Houston where he earned a 10th place finish in the shot put. He threw 54 feet, one and three-quarter inches.

Tappmeyer retires after two decades

By Christopher Woodland
Sports Editor

Many things have changed over the last two decades: the Berlin Wall fell, signifying the once unthinkable Soviet Union collapse, four different men have occupied the White House. We've witnessed Princess Diana's tragic death and O.J. Simpson's fall from national pop icon. Through it all though, Northwest has had one constant mainstay. That all changed on Monday of this week though, as head men's basketball coach Steve Tappmeyer announced his retirement after 21 years as a Bearcat. The decision comes after a 12-15 finish left the Bearcats out of the post season. Northwest Athletic Director Boerigter knew the decision was lingering in Tappmeyer's mind, but was still surprised none the less. "I knew he had his eye on it," Boerigter said. "People work long and hard to put themselves in the position where they can express those options that they've eared, but I guess I was a little surprised because I thought it was another year or so down the road. This is what he's worked for though, and he's earned it so good for him in that regard." During Tappmeyer's time at Northwest, he accumulated 408 wins and a .661 winning percentage, the winningest coach in program history. In just his first season in Maryville, Tappmeyer won the Kodak Coach of the Year Award. He followed that up with three MIAA conference championships and four MIAA tournament championships. The Bearcats have won 20 or more games 10 times under Tappmeyer. As recent as last year, Tappmeyer led the 'Cats to the second round of the NCAA tournament. Boerigter has already begun the search for the next men's Bearcat basketball team, but many of the coaches are currently still playing post-season games, hindering the hiring process. "We've got our eye on a lot of people," Boerigter said. "I've been real busy hear today taking calls and e-mails from people who have expressed an interest." Boerigter said they have no specific plan or deadline of when they intend to have the new coach in place yet.

Freshman scores 19 off bench, final four appearance awaits

By Christopher Woodland

It was one part euphoria and one part tragedy, but the scene last Saturday at Bearcat Arena epitomized what sports are all about. As the final seconds ticked off the clock, the Jefferson High School girls' basketball team embraced each other and jumped for joy as the Southwest (Ludlow) girls hung their heads in disappointment after coming so close to the Class 1 girls' high school final four. "It's unbelievable. It's really great," freshman Kendle Schieber said. "I've watched my older siblings do it, and I've always wanted to do it." The win sent the Eagles to the state tournament for the first time since 1997. The win didn't come easy for Jefferson though. After ending the first half on a Shieber last-second jumper, Jefferson's shooting fell dormant. The Eagles wouldn't make another field goal until Shieber sank another jumper with 5:55 remaining in the game; a time-span of 10 minutes and eight seconds.

During that time, the Eagles' 23-17 halftime lead evaporated, and transformed into a 30-29 Southeast lead, until Schieber's drought-ending jump shot regained the lead for Jefferson. The shot helped fuel a 20-point Jefferson fourth quarter, 11 by Schieber, that resulted in a 45-34 victory and a place as one of the four best teams in class 1. During the third quarter though, Ludlow seemed to have seized all momentum as the Eagles' hopes seemed to be fleeting. "I just got us together in the huddle and said 'Hey we need to go out there and get this, it's still ours, we're still in this thing,'" Jefferson head coach Tyler Pederson said. Schieber, a freshman, was undoubtedly the star and savior of the game. She scored a game-high 19 points, snagged seven rebounds and one steal while coming off the bench. Jefferson made a living off of offensive rebounds in the first half. Nine first-half offensive rebounds netted 11 of the teams 23 points during the first 16 minutes, while turnover plagued both teams all game.

Both teams played an aggressive press for the majority of the game, which led to numerous turnovers by both teams. Jefferson turned the ball over 21 times, while Southeastern finished with 20 turnovers. Next, Jefferson travels to Mizzou Arena to take on Exeter, a 40-33 winner over Montrose in the quarterfinals. "It just feels great after watching these girls work so hard all season long and battle through the injuries they had," Pederson said. Tip-off is scheduled for 9:30 tonight.

Northwest Athletic Director Boerigter knew the decision was lingering in Tappmeyer’s mind, but was still surprised none the less. “I knew he had his eye on it,” Boerigter said. “People work long and hard to put themselves in the position where they can express those options that they’ve eared, but I guess I was a little surprised because I thought it was another year or so down the road. This is what he’s worked for though, and he’s earned it so good for him in that regard.” During Tappmeyer’s time at Northwest, he accumulated 408 wins and a .661 winning percentage, the winningest coach in program history. In just his first season in Maryville, Tappmeyer won the Kodak Coach of the Year Award. He followed that up with three MIAA conference championships and four MIAA tournament championships. The Bearcats have won 20 or more games 10 times under Tappmeyer. As recent as last year, Tappmeyer led the ‘Cats to the second round of the NCAA tournament. Boerigter has already begun the search for the next men’s Bearcat basketball team, but many of the coaches are currently still playing post-season games, hindering the hiring process. “We’ve got our eye on a lot of people,” Boerigter said. “I’ve been real busy hear today taking calls and e-mails from people who have expressed an interest.” Boerigter said they have no specific plan or deadline of when they intend to have the new coach in place yet.

STATE BASKETBALL

Freshman scores 19 off bench, final four appearance awaits

It was one part euphoria and one part tragedy, but the scene last Saturday at Bearcat Arena epitomized what sports are all about. As the final seconds ticked off the clock, the Jefferson High School girls’ basketball team embraced each other and jumped for joy as the Southwest (Ludlow) girls hung their heads in disappointment after coming so close to the Class 1 girls’ high school final four. “It’s unbelievable. It’s really great,” freshman Kendle Schieber said. “I’ve watched my older siblings do it, and I’ve always wanted to do it.” The win sent the Eagles to the state tournament for the first time since 1997. The win didn’t come easy for Jefferson though. After ending the first half on a Shieber last-second jumper, Jefferson’s shooting fell dormant. The Eagles wouldn’t make another field goal until Shieber sank another jumper with 5:55 remaining in the game; a time-span of 10 minutes and eight seconds.

During that time, the Eagles’ 23-17 halftime lead evaporated, and transformed into a 30-29 Southeast lead, until Schieber’s drought-ending jump shot regained the lead for Jefferson. The shot helped fuel a 20-point Jefferson fourth quarter, 11 by Schieber, that resulted in a 45-34 victory and a place as one of the four best teams in class 1. During the third quarter though, Ludlow seemed to have seized all momentum as the Eagles’ hopes seemed to be fleeting. “I just got us together in the huddle and said ‘Hey we need to go out there and get this, it’s still ours, we’re still in this thing,’ Jefferson head coach Tyler Pederson said. Schieber, a freshman, was undoubtedly the star and savior of the game. She scored a game-high 19 points, snagged seven rebounds and one steal while coming off the bench. Jefferson made a living off of offensive rebounds in the first half. Nine first-half offensive rebounds netted 11 of the teams 23 points during the first 16 minutes, while turnover plagued both teams all game.

Both teams played an aggressive press for the majority of the game, which led to numerous turnovers by both teams. Jefferson turned the ball over 21 times, while Southeastern finished with 20 turnovers. Next, Jefferson travels to Mizzou Arena to take on Exeter, a 40-33 winner over Montrose in the quarterfinals. “It just feels great after watching these girls work so hard all season long and battle through the injuries they had,” Pederson said. Tip-off is scheduled for 9:30 tonight.
